history of high point

Incorporated in 1859, High Point earned its name by being the highest point on the North Carolina railroad between Charlotte and Goldsboro. The center of High Point emerged where the railroad crossed the Plank Road, creating a thriving center of commerce.

An abundant supply of wood led to the production of spindles and axe handles, followed shortly by a booming furniture industry. High Point Furniture Company was the first furniture factory in the United States, and realized immediate success. Other local entrepreneurs saw the opportunity in furniture and began their own companies. By 1903, High Point was home to more than 30 furniture factories. Intuitively, the manufacturers of the area established their first wholesale furnishings show in 1909, which today is the largest wholesale home furnishings show in the world.

A thriving textile industry had also grown throughout High Point during this time, with plants scattered throughout the city and surrounding villages. It was not long before High Point had also garnered the title of “Hosiery Capital of the World.” In recognition of these influential industries, a four-story chest of drawers (the middle drawer of which holds a dangling pair of socks) was constructed to commemorate the city’s worldwide renown.

Over the years, High Point has built on its rich history. Explore High Point’s furniture heritage, unique architecture, historical homes, and strong African-American history. Explore & enjoy High Point!
